

Broccoli feeds your gut microbes!

Cruciferous vegetables like broccoli, kale, cabbage and cucumber have a compound called glucosinolates.

Glucosinolates feed your gut microbes that keep your intestines healthy, and recent studies have shown that they also increase apoptosis and hinder mitosis in tumor cells, meaning glucosinolates could play a role in cancer prevention.